IP: Business Ethics

September 29 – October 3, 2003

Testimonials from last year:

“the best IP I did and one of my top 5 courses”

“good ethics can mean good economics”

“good management isn’t just about meeting bottomlines anymore”

“I have no hesitation in recommending the Business Ethics IP ... an opportunity to take stock of your value system before launching back into the ’jungle’”

“I thoroughly enjoy the subject”

MODERN BUSINESS is conducted in a climate of society’s expectations of managers’ behaviour. This climate derives partly from tradition and partly from responses to recent developments, such as e-commerce and, unfortunately, recent corporate collapses. The demands that this climate imposes on business are sometimes misconceived or confused, but their impacts on business are undoubted. This IP considers the ethical responsibilities of managers and corporations. We shall examine the fundamentals of moral reasoning in dealing with the ethical problems and dilemmas of business. We shall also identify the limits of ethics, and distinguish genuine from mistaken ethical requirements in business.

The aim of the IP is to assist you to recognise ethical issues that will confront you in your business careers, and to develop your understanding and analytical skills in the resolution of ethical problems and dilemmas.

The IP will introduce you to the basics of moral theory and moral reasoning and then discuss a variety of ethical issues in business, such as the morality of markets, corporate responsibility and regulation, codes of ethics and international business ethics. Lectures and case-study seminar discussions will be complemented with rôle plays and video materials.

Methods of instruction will include classes on basic moral theory and reasoning, case studies, exercises, and presentations.

This IP is designed:

1. To develop moral awareness in individuals who, while under severe time pressures, will be faced with a constant stream of decisions about situations that rarely come labelled as “ethical dilemmas.”

2. To inspire and empower you to imagine solutions to envision a personal rôle in shaping a positive future.

3. To depict business as a social system of responsibilities, commitments, relationships and purposes.

4. To see relationships based on respect, honesty, fairness and trust as fundamental to the effective and ethical functioning of organizations.
5. To instil a recognition of a leader’s responsibilities toward employees, customers, community, suppliers and owners.

6. To suggest how ethical awareness can provide benefits to an organization.

By the end of this IP, you should be able to:

a. recognise and anticipate ethical issues in a range of business activities;

b. use appropriate concepts and methods of reasoning to understand and resolve ethical problems and dilemmas in management;

c. feel confident in explaining the importance of ethical considerations to stakeholders in business;

d. use ethics imaginatively to enhance business decision making;

e. recognise the value position you bring to management;

f. identify some common forms of ethical failure and success in corporations;

g. recognise that arguing for an ethical position is not mere preaching.

Assessment

The IP will be graded (A, B, C). Assessment will be in two parts: completion of a case analysis and participation in class. For the five-page case analysis, you may choose from a number of cases that will be distributed in class. It should be submitted by 10 October. In this exercise you should at the very least:

- identify the ethical issues at stake and if necessary indicate why they are ethical;
- present the facts and the salient values upon which you will deliberate;
- argue for a conclusion indicating what objections you have taken into account;
- suggest what measures should be taken to discourage misconduct, and encourage ethical conduct;
- suggest how you would encourage your organisation to adopt these measures.

The case analysis will be worth 60% of the assessment.

Each member of the class will be required to participate in the presentation of a case discussion or other class activity, as well as general discussion. A one-page summary of presentations should be prepared for the class beforehand. Assessment will be based on general participation, involvement in specific activities, and the one-page summary; class participation will be worth 40% of the total mark.

Program timetable

The first session of each day will begin at 9:00, break at 10:45 for 30 minutes, and conclude at 1:00 for lunch. Afternoons will be available for reflecting, reading, writing, and syndicate discussions. There will be homework consisting of reading and other tasks for nights 1 to 4 inclusive.
Day 1: Introduction.

What do you hope to get out of this IP?
The importance of reflection as a tool. What ethical problems have you encountered in business that have caused you to reflect on your ethics?
Moral theory and moral reasoning in business
Theories of morality: subjectivism, egoism, and relativism; utilitarianism and deontology.
Case study.
Moral reasoning — what happened in the case study?
What is an ethical opinion?
   Principled conduct.
   The avoidance of hypocrisy.
   Defining the issue.
   What can ethics mean in a practical sense?
   Nobody admits ethical defeat
   Ethics costs
   Accountability and responsibility
   Ethical empowerment
   Is good ethics good business?

Day 2: Ethical issues in corporations

Report back on homework
The frameworks
Ethics and the market system
What is a corporation? What are the responsibilities of managers in corporations? Can a corporation have a conscience?
Issues in corporate ethics:
   Social costs and social responsibilities
   Trust and competition
   Workers and consumers
   The environment
   Corporate philanthropy

Day 3: Corporate governance

Report back on homework
Controlling temptations
Control systems, accountability and responsibility
Directors, boards and managers
Shareholders
Corporate sustainability and corporate collapse
Regulation & ethics — watchdogs and auditors.

Day 4: International bus & ethical relativism.

Report back on homework
Principles of international business ethics
Business across cultural contexts
Politics and business
Gifts and bribes
Discrimination issues
Multinational corporations
The responsibilities of MNCs to stakeholders
Ethics codes and legal regulation for MNCs

Day 5: Structuring ethics in organisations

Report back on homework
Structures and cultures to support ethics
Leadership
Rôles and organisations: do rôles absolve one of moral responsibility?
Codes of ethics and conduct
Decision models
Incentives and disincentives
Regulation
Whistleblowing
Review and conclusions

Class discussions

Key questions that should be addressed in class discussions are set out below. They are not the only questions you might ask, but you are a useful starting point.

1. What are the salient facts in this case, ie. what facts are relevant to making an ethical decision about the case and what facts are irrelevant? Define the decision to be made.
2. Who are the people and organisations who will be affected by your decision? In what ways will they affect your decision?
3. What moral reasoning is involved in this case? Go through the moral reasoning for your intended decision and indicate why you believe it to be sound.
4. What part does the culture of the organisation play in the formulation of the issue and the decision making process? How will this culture be affected by the decision you advocate?
5. What ethical principles are relevant to deciding the case? What consequences will the decision have for those who make it; for those who carry it out; for the organisation and its customers?
6. Are there analogous cases to help in your decision? How are they useful?