

TE - RANGE I

BOOKS

Te Rangi Books

IN THE school holidays in 1962 I spent a week cataloguing the library of Ernest Marks (“Gar”) at his home, “Te Rangi,” 1078 Malvern Road, Armadale, Melbourne, in longhand in a school exercise book. It was then typed up at Marks & Saulwick Pty. Ltd. After retrieving both the original and the typed copy from an old suitcase in the dusty attic here in Balmain, I have digitised the typed copy, using the hand-written record to correct any typos (there were very few).

There are 467 items in the collection, which includes five books that were not in the house when I listed the others. The first four of the books I have here, the other I well remember from “Te Rangi.” Perhaps Gar had lent them that week. They are:

The Jewish Black Book Cttee. The Black Book: the Nazi Crime Against the Jewish People. 1946, N.Y.: Duell, Sloan, and Pearce.

Cohon, B. D. Introduction to Judaism. 1942, N.Y.: Bloch Publishing.

van Loon, H. W. The Story of Mankind. 1937, London: Harrap.

Hardy, F. J. (“Ross Franklyn”) Power Without Glory: a novel in three parts. 1950, Melbourne: Realist Printing.

Russell of Liverpool, Lord. The Scourge of the Swastika: a short history of Nazi war crimes. 1954

My 16-year-old’s citing was imperfect: I recorded each work’s title and its author’s surname, as well as the bookcase where the item was stored, but nothing else. I have used Google and the National Library of Australia’s web site to determine the likely date of publication of the books. In 1962 I classified each book into one of eleven categories. I haven’t reproduced these classifications here, or used any others. Instead, I have separately listed the books by bookcase, as recorded. This is because Gar’s shelving might reveal his own classification of the books.

The next page lists the eleven categories, and presents a schematic of the location of the ten book-cases around the two rooms at “Te Rangi.”

The report is in two parts: books by shelving, books by author.

Where are they now? On his death in 1971, the books were divided amongst his three children. In our family, the books at 3 Warida Avenue were divided among the three grandchildren and some are stored in “Burntwood” at Sorrento. With this catalogue some of these might be identified. (Recently, a few post-1962 signed books have come to light and are included.)

In memory of a grandfather who loved books, Ernest Norman Marks (1888–1971).
